Not illustrated. 1915 Excerpt: . a different value for each value of the ballistic throw over the entire scale. In a supposedly high grade instrument differences as high as 20 per cent. in the constant have been found. In a given deflection or ballistic instrument the best condition for proportionality of deflections and throws with steady and instantaneous currents, respectively, obtains when the axis of the coil is coincident with the axis of symmetry of the magnet. To keep these axes coincident when the coil assumes different angular positions it is necessary that the upper suspension terminals be short--so as to avoid the possibility of bent terminals--and parallel to the fiber, and that the lower suspension be so constructed as to exert no lateral force upon the coil. This last named condition is closely complied with if the torque is made small, and if there is no deformation in the...
