Createspace, United States, 2013. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 198 x 116 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Travel experiences of the author during his trip to the holy city of India, Varanasi is the main theme. The three weeks stay in the holy city, considered as one of the most popular tourist destinations, gave me varying doses of culture shock from a variety of experiences, is what Jaikiran says in one of the chapters. Visits to three prominent north Indian cities located along the banks of the Ganges, viz., Varanasi, Mirzapur and Allahabad and the related experiences make most of the text. For first time travelers to any of these places, the book is a useful guide as it gives useful tips and practical suggestions. For example, in the chapter relating to the Ghats of the Ganges, the author says, Ghats are hunting grounds for touts who are on a look out for the unsuspecting tourists wanting to take a boat ride or to perform some religious rites in the river. They also make brisk business selling containers for collecting Ganges Water, considered the most auspicious last drink for a dying Hindu. An unsuspecting tourist will always be taken for a ride by the touts who offer packages for a 30 minutes boat ride covering all major Ghats and also a small puja in the Ganges . Jaikiran, in his book, has also tried to portray nature and people. Evening sun peeped through rich foliage bathing the monuments in a golden light. Eager to reach our next destination, we quickened our pace. The Pipal tree that stands testimony to one of the greatest episodes in written history was surrounded by a sea of worshippers is a sample text that describes nature. Seeds of the book...
